

Frida Kahlo's clothing style inspired many designers. Many women have started to wear long skirts, corset-style tops, blouses and embroidered dresses. Even Kahlo's hairstyle has become very trendy: dark braids and a bunch of bright flowers in the hair.

6/24

Huipil was the most common traditional garment worn by indigenous women from central Mexico to Central America.

Princeton Art Museum
10:30

This huipil was sleeveless and usually had patchwork done on it. This tunic was not body hugging, thus allowing passage of air.

Skirts were worn more commonly than any other form of clothing. These skirts were either ankle length or knee-length. The skirts always had a flare to them.

Campers need:

- Scissors
- Thimble
- Needles
- Tape measure
- 18" clear ruler
- Seam ripper
- Pins
- Supply case

Please label all items.

All other supplies will be provided by Style Studio and the South Mountain YMCA.

Sombreros

Sombrero in English refers to a type of wide-brimmed hat from Mexico used to shield from the sun.

7/1

Straw Bag/Bolsa

Ladies wind their hair in braids using colorful ribbons to keep unruly hair tidy while they are cooking and cleaning, but especially cooking.

Puebla Dress

For grand occasions, the women wore a Puebla dress, with cross stitched patterns. Even today women attend traditional functions in these dresses,

Campers will use Mexico and the traditional clothing as inspiration for their designs in this session.

They will learn basic hand stitches, embroidery and sewing machine usage.

7/8

Hair Ornaments

Style Studio
Runway Show

Photo Shoot

